ADDITIONS TO THE FILE-FAX MANUAL

File-Fax uses this time to rearrange information on your data disk. The more new records added, the greater the time the computer will spend updating the database.

If an open bracket "[" is immediately followed by a single digit (0-9), then File-Fax will skip the number of blank lines specified by the digit after it has printed the current line. If no number is specified, then the open bracket will be printed in the report. When the report is printed the open bracket and number will not be printed. Line spacing commands are cummulative, so more than one of these commands may be used on the same line to obtain more than 9 blank lines
